Adopt me! :)

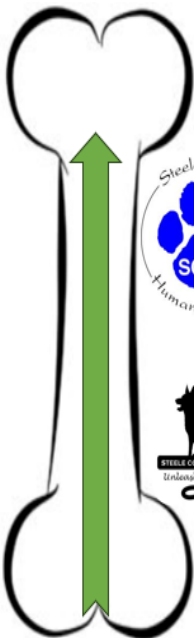

Cash here! Hey! I have been making very good progress in my new foster home. I fit in with all the pups - big and small. I am altered, house trained, microchipped, and up to date on all age-appropriate shots. My foster mom says, "He does OK with the cats (he's a herding breed so he will try and herd them every now and then but it doesn't bother my cats). He is a little uncertain of new people but does warm up fairly quickly and then LOVES butt scratches! Due to being a little skittish I would recommend a home with no small children. He stays out in the doghouse all the time. He is a very chill guy who would love walks a couple times a week! We are working on walking and doing great with a training collar." My adoption fee is $350.

News & Information

How to Know What Your Ferret is Feeling

- Excited or curious: holds its nose to the ground and runs around sniffing.
- Wants to play: run up to you and then backing away in a “catch me if you can!” manner.
- Wants something: locks its eyes on you and you have to figure out what it wants. Sometimes you can figure it out if the ferret is standing and staring in a certain spot.
- Fearful or anxious: cower down and look sideways or over its shoulder at the thing that is upsetting it.
 - Afraid: runs and hides, if it can.
- Hungry or thirsty: starts playing with its empty food or water dish.
- Sick or in pain: squints their eyes and keeps their bodies low to the ground.

Happy Tail!

“We lost our cat a little over a year ago ... Our daughter took it the ... So I helped her boyfriend as I went and met Puck on 8/7/25 and ten days later on 8/17 I went and got him and met the boyfriend It was the best surprise for our whole family but this was Haleys cat. Instant tears filled her eyes when she found out it was Puck. His name is now Maverick aka Mav. He is the best little kitty, the perfect amount of snuggles and playfulness. He has the loudest motor and is VERY vocal.

He also comes a running when he hears his auto feeder. He has all our hearts ❤️”
